Introduction

Employers with 250 or more employees are legally required to publish, on an annual basis, certain information relating to their gender pay gap. This statement sets out the relevant information for Doncaster Culture & Leisure Trust, for the period 5th April 2018.

This information has been calculated in accordance with the requirements of the gender pay gap regulations.

The gender pay gap

The gender pay gap is the difference between the average pay of men and women, expressed as a percentage. The gender pay gap is different from equal pay. Equal pay is concerned with pay differences between men and women who carry out the same jobs, similar jobs or work of equal value. It is unlawful to pay people unequally because they are a man or a woman.

There are many factors which contribute to, or cause, a gender pay gap, and these will vary between different employers. Some relate to wider society, such as the type of career choices men and women have typically tended to make, and some may be specific to a particular organisation. We have set out in this statement the main factors we consider are contributing to our gender pay gap.

Organisational context

Gender pay gap

The mean gender pay gap

This figure shows the difference between the mean (average) hourly rate of pay of male and female employees in the relevant pay period, as a percentage.

Our mean gender pay gap is -0.5%.

The median gender pay gap

This figure shows the difference between the median (mid-point) hourly rate of pay of male and female employees in the relevant pay period, as a percentage.

Our median gender pay gap is 0%

We consider the main reasons for the above gap is due to the nature of some roles within the organisation appealing to females more than male employees, e.g. part-time Fitness Class Instructors and Swimming Teachers. These roles are paid in the upper quartile range. The gaps have closed since the last report as a result of a salary strategy being implemented over three years.

Actions to address any pay gaps	DCLT is committed to reducing our pay gaps, as reported above, and have recently undertaken a salary strategy with actions to address lower salaries. We involved trade unions in developing this. The actions have commenced and are being implemented over three years and includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • reviewing pay to ensure it is applied fairly and equitably and that no gender, or other, bias is occurring • reviewing recruitment processes to try and attract more male candidates to roles in which they currently are under-represented, including running training courses for existing staff and potential employees to upskill them. • working closely with schools/colleges to develop a better understanding of employment opportunities within the organisation, including offering work experience placements and training courses We will be monitoring progress on a regular basis and reporting on this in future gender pay gap statements. These actions are part of, and integrated with, our broader approach to equality and diversity in the workplace
